YOUR CHILDREN.
Give Credit For Honest
Effort

By Olive Roberts Barton

The nemesis of all school children is the report card. The child takes it home as a rule in fear and trembling. There is that 70 in language, the 60 in conduct, and nothing over 80 on its brazen surface.

He knows he's in for it, and yet all month he has done the best he could. Well—perhaps he talked too much, or didn't keep step in ranks, but then it seems he just couldn't help it. He got so stiff and kind of lonely sitting still and trying to concentrate, that he felt the need of company. He is a very friendly little chap and there's Pete right behind him, who understands him even better than the teacher.

But still and all he has really tried. And it just happened that on the monthly tests they asked all the questions he didn't know. Now if they'd only asked about nouns instead of verbs and participles he would have made about 90 in language. But he can't get participles through his head, and those conjunctions that bounce about so, and antecedents—why he'll never get them straight if he lives to be a hundred.

Facing Parents.

He keeps his report card hidden for two days, then the teacher tells him they're all in, signed, but his. He is to produce it next day at the latest.

So that night he faces the lions. Dad looks over it and says he won't sign it. Mother says she's going to have a talk with the teacher.

Jimmy takes it back and it isn't signed. "I thought it was something like that," says the teacher. "You didn't show it to your parents at all."

"Yes, I did, but Dad said he wouldn't sign it."

"I'm not surprised," replies the teacher. "I wouldn't sign it myself. That 60 in conduct tells the whole story. If you paid more attention and stopped talking to Pete, you'd hear something once in a while."

"I can't get verbs. I don't know what it's all about," defends Jimmy.

"What! After all my work and trouble. I think you'll have to go back in a lower grade and do it all over again."

Jimmy blanches. "Oh, please, Miss Smith. I'll try. I'll try harder than ever. Really I will."

So he's kept on and the next month is just about the same, 65 in conduct and 70 in language.

Trouble Increases.

He is pretty good in arithmetic. Only in denominated numbers there is so much multiplying and dividing of big figures that he makes little mistakes. He tries but some little demon insists on putting down a four for a five. And there's only one right answer. No credit is given for correct process.

He goes through the year with that club of a report card over his head.

At finals some way he is shoved through because it looks better on

Does Your Skin Need Muscle Oil or Astringent Preparation?

USE LATTER TO CLOSE CONSPICUOUS PORES

Mae Clarke uses the correct creams and lotions for her particular type of skin with the result that her complexion is smooth and flawless.

By Alicia Hart

When the four essential preparations have been put down on the list of necessities for your beauty cabinet, stop and diagnose your own skin before adding another item.

Are there fine lines around your eyes, expression line about your mouth, wrinkles across the forehead? Do you notice any enlarged pores, slight blemishes or other complexion defects? Is the skin sallow, too dry, excessively oily or otherwise imperfect?

Make a mental note of the exact condition of your skin and be absolutely honest with yourself. Then, as soon as you've decided what's wrong, add to your list the skin, use pore cream on alternate cosmetic preparations which will correct the faulty conditions.

the school's records to have so many children "pass." He gets into diagramming now, and those conjunctions and antecedents and participles are real enemies.

More trouble to face, more hiding of report cards. More lectures. And all the time he is doing the best he can, or almost. No credit for trying. No sympathy for mistakes. No anything.

Is it quite fair? Couldn't a parent spot weak places and try to

There are grand muscle oils for expression lines and fine wrinkles.

These are to be patted into the skin after excess tissue cream has been removed and are to be left on all night. A few drops of one of these rich oils does much to keep the throat white and smooth. However, if yours is an oily skin, obviously muscle oil isn't for you. Try, instead, one of the creams with astringent properties that help to close pores which exude too much oil. It should be left on all night too.

Pore creams are infinitely beneficial to complexions with conspicuous pores. If you have dry skin, use pore cream on alternate nights. If yours is an oily condition, use it every night.

EXCITING BOWLS

McHardy And Forrest
Tie Against Brothers

The most exciting tie played to date in the Open Pairs Lawn Bowls Championship was witnessed on the Hongkong Football Club green yesterday afternoon when W. McHardy and W. Forrest met K. M. Omar and A. M. Omar. It was a ding-dong struggle right through, and at the end of the 21 heads, the score was 23-23.

The Omars started off well, taking a lead of 9-0, but they fell off at this stage. At 11, they remained stuck for six heads, to allow their opponents to have the advantage of 18-11.

They fought back gallantly, however, and had drawn level on the eighteenth with a count of four. McHardy and Forrest had a lead of five when the last head was played, but the Omars obtained a count of five to draw level. It was dark by this time and further play was almost impossible.

On the Craigengower C.C. green, A. E. Carey and W. Glendenning were never seriously troubled by Hunter and Mist, winning by 25-14.

WORLD TELEPHONE PROSPECTS

Although Hongkong is cut off from telephone contact with the outside world, if we except the link with Canton, there are hopes that the time may not be far distant when we shall be linked up with Europe through Shanghai. We shall then come into the plans which are being devised for round-the-world telephone conversation, in which every important capital and commercial city will play a part. Already the earth is well provided with chains of telephone connections, in which regard it may be noted that the United States is able to talk across the Pacific with Manila and across the Atlantic through Amsterdam, Berlin and Brussels to Manila again or to other Eastern oceanic points. Working lines through to Tokyo and Shanghai to the United States and Oceania are still, however, lacking to provide the links between the last great centres of population. The principal missing link, between the United States and Tokyo, is rapidly being forged and will probably fit into the chain before the end of the year. Tests already carried out between America and Japan for about a year indicate the prospect of regular service in the near future. In all, there are now no fewer than fifty-two nations in telephone contact with each other, and every nation having more than a hundred thousand telephones, except Japan and China, is in part of some worldwide chain. One interesting development is that Japanese and Dutch engineers are perfecting the link between Tokyo and Bandoeng in Java, which is the termini of two chains to Europe, Australia and New Zealand. Manila and Bandoeng are already connected. An arresting thought is that all these developments have occurred since the day, in 1876, when Alexander Graham Bell conversed with a companion seated in another room a few feet away. It is estimated that there are now fewer than 33,000,000 telephones in operation throughout the world to-day, a fact which vividly illustrates the growth of this now indispensable means of communication.

NOTES OF THE DAY

GASOMETERS

A row of tenement houses is now being erected within a stone-throw of the gasometers in the Wanchai district. A month ago this would have passed unnoticed, or at least without comment. To-day, with the explosion at West Point fresh in the public mind, the appearance of the scaffolding has given rise to criticism of Government for permitting the work to proceed. Anyone acquainted with government methods will doubtless readily believe that the plans for these premises were submitted months ago and approved prior to the gas explosion. But it still might prove to be in the public interest to stay progress until the result of the West Point inquiry is known.

DEFENCE

The House of Commons recently devoted a whole day to consideration of a question which has long interested military experts—the bringing of the three services, for land, air and water, under a single ministry of defence. One point of view demands the utmost possible efficiency and the closest coordination of all the fighting units of the country and the Empire. Another favours the same unifying policy, but advocates the desirability of keeping the service chiefs in a subordinate place, and of considering certain new factors—namely the emergence of the air force, the fact that modern warfare now involves the whole national life, the existence of the League of Nations, and agreements already arrived at, or about to be arrived at, between nations. "We have to consider defence," said one of the speakers, "as a part of the responsibilities of this country in a world order."

BRITISH POLICY

The question has to be asked and answered—What are the fighting services for in these days when the country is resolutely in favour of peace and disgusted with high expenditure? Part of the answer is easily given; a considerable number of ships, soldiers and aeroplanes are employed in what may be called the police work of the Empire; it would be impossible to guarantee law and order in outlying parts of the world without some backing of authorised force. But this does not touch the main problem of home defence. As Great Britain has no intention of attacking any country, against what possible enemy, or combination of enemies is she preparing to defend herself? At one time France may have been thought of as a possible danger. But that is now out of the question. It is then against a possibly aggressive Germany? It would be strange if this were the determining factor in her defence policy, since Great Britain has been willing at one and the same time to allow Germany to increase her armaments and to urge France to decrease hers.

RATIO OF FORCE

Apart from police work, the degree of British armament is to a large extent determined by the state of mind prevailing among the leading nations of Europe. Great Britain recognises that nothing is so likely to lead to war as unbalanced and competition in armaments, and that in the present state of mind of Europe the only means of averting this competition is some agreed ratio of force. The only hope of disarmament at the moment is concerted limitation on a basis which will satisfy the German demand for equality and the French demand for security. The difficulties of reaching agreement have become all too clear, but Great Britain realises that they would be greater still if she stood aside from the controversy, and if her potential weight as a champion against aggression were reduced. That is why she has had to inform the world that if other air forces are not in due course scaled down, hers will have to be increased. Thus the ideal of disarmament plays an increasing part in determining her estimates for the army, navy and air force. This end, it is held, is not to be attained by the premature, unconditional disarmament of the most peaceful nations, but by their readiness for as much disarmament (subject to police necessities) as the other powers can be induced to accept.

THE STRATOSPHERE

A world conference of authorities on the stratosphere is likely to be held in Russia in 1936. It will coincide with a total eclipse of the sun, which is the most advantageous time to study the upper layers of the air. Plans are also being formulated for a new ascent into the stratosphere this summer. The intention is to study the stratosphere as much as possible with instruments improved by the knowledge gained from the recent record ascent. The results of these studies will be discussed at the conference.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG

May 18th.—Last night at my diary and my mail until past one of the clock, and so very late into my bed, and this morning so sleepy that I did wish my office at the devil! Yet I must needs get me there, for those who work not, eat not, and as Creed did say, in his course habit, neither do they drink, which be far worse. But I fear that he be somewhat of a wine-bibber. Yet, when I do get there as usual, I do find life not so bad, as I do frankly admit that I do enjoy my work, and the man whom I do consider to be the most miserable in the world is he who doth so hate his daily toil that upon a Sunday night at his dinner he doth start a lamentation about the approach of Black Monday. After, to a preview of a picture, and when I do see the Trailer first, it well nigh made me to vomit; but later, the picture itself proves not so bad, and I am once more at a stonede at the folly of the Showmen, who stuffe Trailers down our gullets. I will admit, however, that in a show, whereof the attraction be of the nether limbs, a Trailer may bring in business. Dined this night at My Lord's, where the witliest of company and a most pleasant evening. And so to bed. 19th.—Up very betimes, and, after bathing and trimming myself, to my office. There I order my papers, and by intention to the Race Course. But Lord! it is so hot that I must needs back to my chamber and do on fresh garments from top to toe. Thus I am somewhat late for luncheon, where I do entertain Mr. Muley-grubs and his Lady and one of my sister's daughters. But first we do take a little Hollands water in our ginger-ale, it being so hot. And this, as I suppose, is as clean a drink as any. After I can but stay for three races, and as I wager not, do pick the winner of each of them. But it is ever so. For the wagering of real money doth seem to cloud the intellect, and to beset the mind with doubts. But of this I am well convinced, that, if I had abundant monies, so as never to miss a few hundred florins, I could win at the game. For it is ever the straining after a big dividend that doth defeat me. Later at Lawn Bowles, and we do win our match, albeit more hardly than we should have done, and I, for one, play very ill. But this I do charge upon the fact that I could procure no doughnuts for my tea! Did on my evening game later at the Clubbe, and to the Hostelry, where with my luncheon guests I do eat and dance. Later, after seeing my sister's daughter back to her mother's house, back to the Clubbe; and so to bed. 20th. (Lord's Day).—This day I do open my eyes very late, somewhere about noon, and, after my bath, did fall to ordering my garments. And so I do find that I must needs buy me a thimble, and also discover some means whereby my needles shall not rust. About seven of the clock across to Seventh Heaven, where, to my greatest possible discontent, I do find that Mistress Ann hath retired to rest, being somewhat fatigued. So, to an Inn, where I do assuage my sorrow with a glass of Hollands Water. Later, to the Clubbe, where with some others I do fall into talk of the dangers of bathing in the Colony, which, as Mr. Povey says, are less than in most climates. But, says he, there are three places which do require caution, viz. Ten and Twelve Mile Beaches upon the mainland, and Big Wave Bay, nigh to Shek O. But to these I do send a message to my wife, poor wretch, by the electric telegraph, that she shall sail in September to join me, which doth please me beyond expression, and her too, as I do hope. Very late writing out-set, it is my counsel that hel

There's Flattery in those new Evening Gowns

Julia

COSTUMES COURTESY OF STEIN AND BLAINE

LEFT is a youthful model of white crepe with red coin dots. It emphasizes the bust, molds the hips, and has long sleeves open at the shoulders.

THE woman who wears a 1934 summer evening dress will have a heart as light as her dancing feet. For these new little numbers are flattering beyond words, and what girl doesn't thrill to a bit of flattery?

The moon, shimmering through the windows of the ballroom, won't be more heartbreakingly beautiful than your frock—which may be reminiscent of the eighteenth century, definitely modern or emulative of the styles of Japanese princesses.

In the modern category come streamlined models and, of course, the windblown lines of Schiaparelli.

The three silhouettes named are outstanding in evening modes this year. You resemble the portrait of one of your ancestors or you look like something fresh from the Orient or you are too, too modern for words. Whichever design you choose, you're sure to look perfectly grand.

LACE is a headliner in the parade of formal gowns. You can have stiff lace with an Elizabethan collar or lace that is as soft as the pussy-willow. The vaporous materials, too, come in for a share of popularity.

Tulle, mousseline de sole, organdie and chiffon are used to make the ethereal-type gowns. If you prefer something a little more practical, but just as fashionable, there are luscious crepes, satin, taffeta and summer velvets.

Look for printed evening gowns. And remember that small prints in diminutive floral patterns or in intricate polka-dotted groupings are the newest things on the market. Then, if you're in favour of borrowing an idea or two from the east, look for Japanese and Chinese motifs on capelets and Coolie coat wraps.

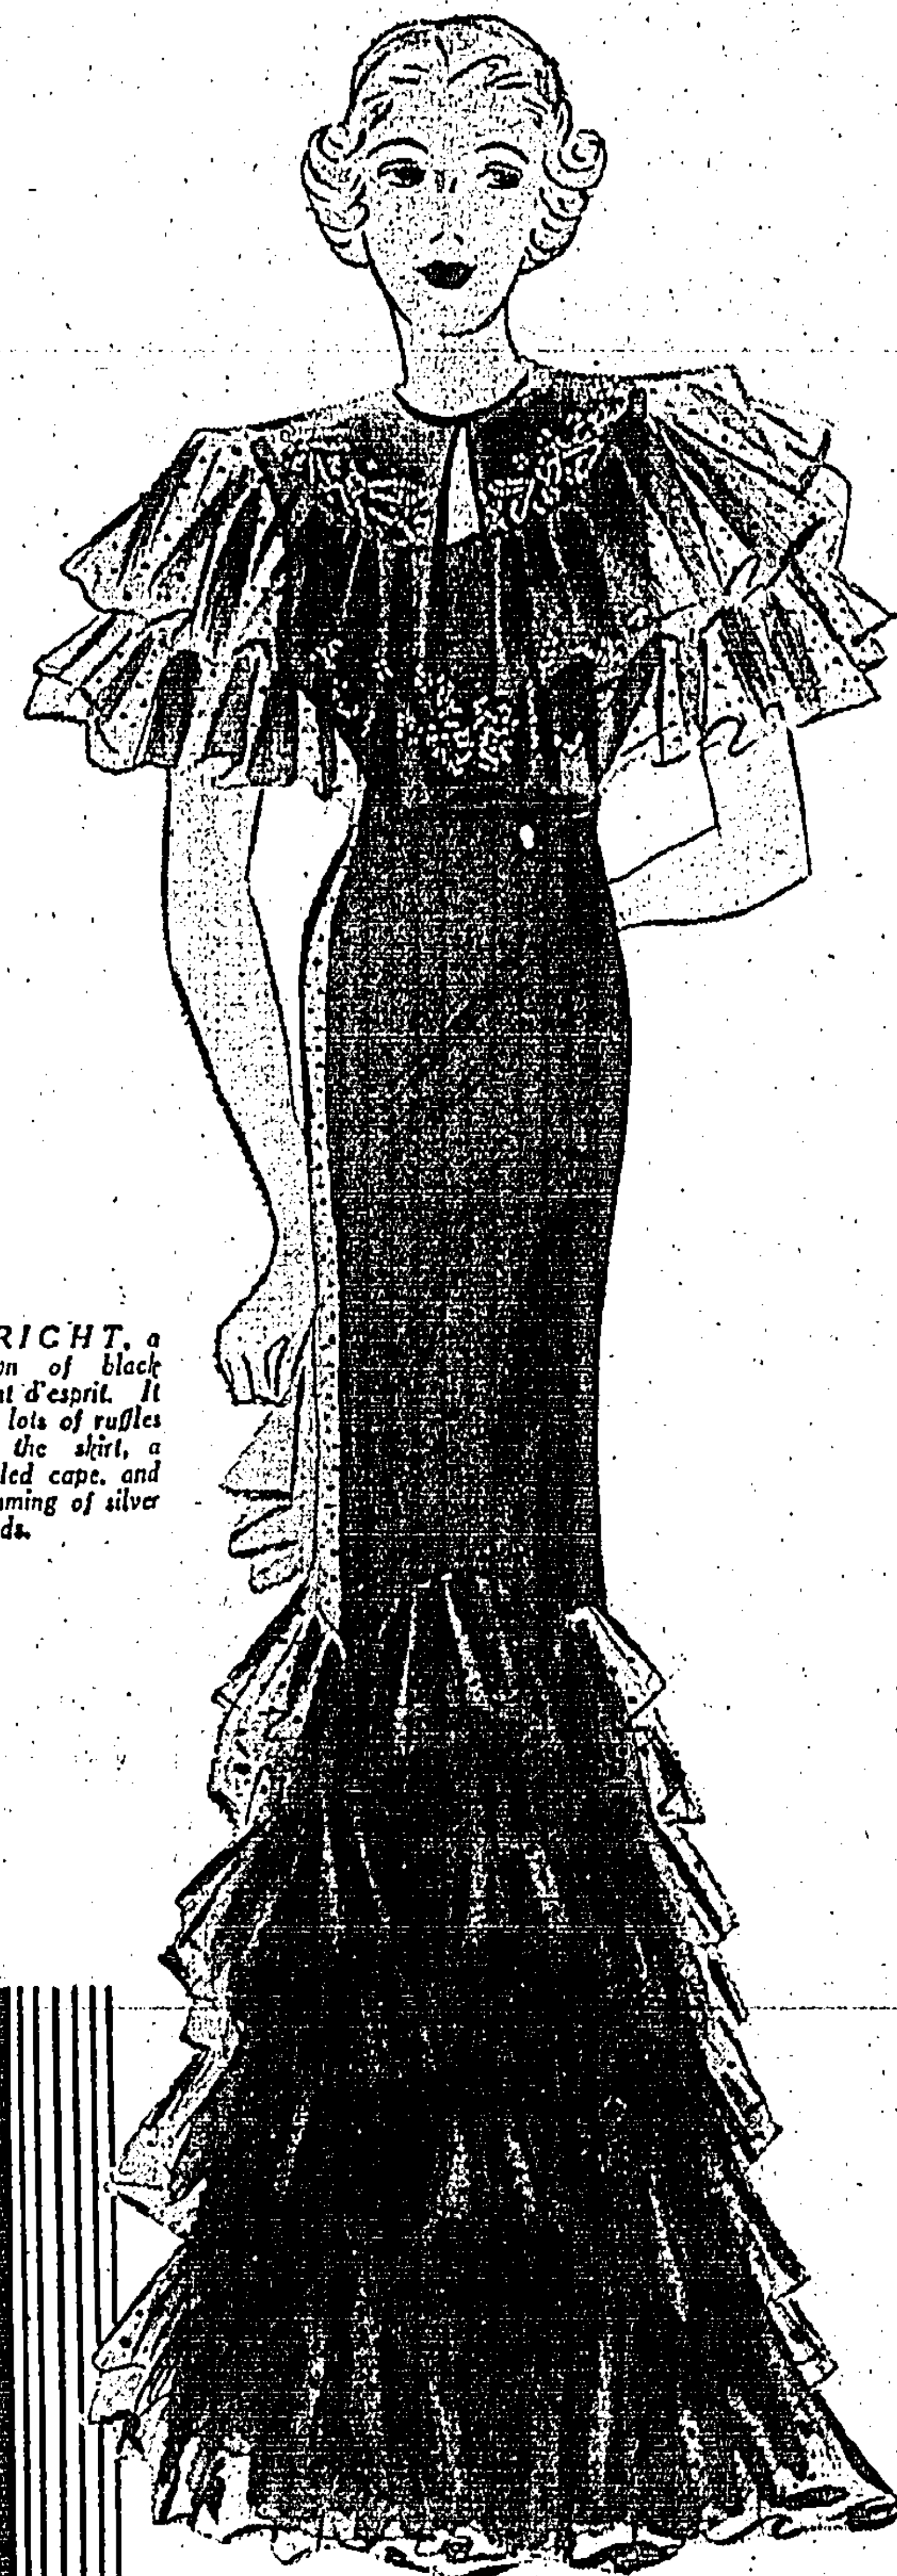

Stick to fullness below the knees. Form-fitting through waists and hips (not to mention that busts are emphasized), formal dresses flare at the knees and swirl gracefully on down to the floor.

Trains are good, too. You can have a little one that is really a mere suggestion of a train or one that sweeps along for yards behind you.

LOOK for covered shoulders and do try on some gowns with low necklines before you decide to stick to the high-in-the-front, low-in-the-back mode. It may be that the former will flatter you more.

The bustle theme is stressed by designers. Sometimes it is a draped bow and again it takes the form of stiff, pleated panels that are fastened under the belt and swing loose to the hem.

Remember that accessories are important. Long white kid or lace gloves, shoes dyed to match your gown, a harmonizing bag, gossamer-like hose and one of those new evening hats should be included in your spring budget for formal attire. They're not awfully expensive and they do help any frock.

RIGHT, a gown of black point d'esprit. It has lots of ruffles on the skirt, a ruffled cape, and trimming of silver beads.

At the far left is a taffeta frock of periwinkle blue with pink and white polka dots grouped far apart. Reminiscent of a by-gone era, it emphasizes the bustle idea by a large bow at the back.

In the centre is a rose crepe gown whose jacket has dolman sleeves trimmed with silver bugle beads to match the design around the armholes of the dress.

At the right is a gown of navy satin with a wide scarf shoulder drape with hand-painted floral motifs. The long train is painted in like manner.

STRANGER THAN FICTION
STORIES OF THE WORK OF MODERN SPIES

THE STRANGE CASE OF THE OFFICER IN THE TOWER

The Tower of London

Wondering tourists... flitting the pages of pamphlets, heeding the sing-song of Cockney guides... saw a young officer taking exercise under the eyes of an armed guard in the famous Tower of London. Who was he? Cockney guides frowned. But rumours about the young Officer in the Tower spread, and soon the War Office made a brief announcement that stirred England with the news that a British Lieutenant had been accused of selling his country to a foreign power. His story is told here, in the first of a series of true modern spy tales.

BY MILTON BRONNER

Lieutenant Norman Bailie-Stewart of the Seaforth Highlanders, arrived in Berlin, drained his beer mug and looked about the crowded cafe with the slightly wistful expression of a stranger in a strange land who realizes that he is not likely to run across anybody he knows. Suddenly his wandering gaze was caught and held by a man at a nearby table. The man hesitated, smiled, then came over and addressed the lieutenant courteously in English with a strong German accent.

In a few moments the young officer found himself confessing to his new acquaintance that he was lonely. The German volunteered to fix that. He knew a girl, he said, a fine, friendly young girl. Would the lieutenant return to this cafe at the same time to-morrow evening?

The lieutenant would. He did. The philanthropic German was there as he had promised he would be. With him was a fair-haired, blue-eyed German girl, young, with the luscious curves. She was introduced simply as Fraulein Marie Louise. She turned out to be all that her sponsor had said she would be and more. Lieutenant Bailie-Stewart later told the British military court martial which tried him on a charge of giving information to Germany through his association with Marie Louise and Otto Waldemar Obst, the man who introduced them.

BEGINNING OF ROMANCE.

For several weeks, the Lieutenant testified, he and Marie Louise were inseparable. They did Berlin together thoroughly, visited music halls, cafes and amusement parks. Marie Louise was a poor young man's dream come true. She said she was well-off and insisted upon paying all the checks and admission fees. At first Obst went on the expeditions, too, but when a love affair developed between the lieutenant and Marie Louise, their discreet friend considerably withdrew.

In his testimony during the eight-day trial which began March 20, 1932, at Chelsea military barracks, Bailie-Stewart claimed that he had gone to Berlin with the idea of becoming a liaison officer with the German Army. That was why

GETS PROMISE OF MONEY.

However, the separation was not to be for long. She planned to be in Holland herself and he could see her there. In fact, he said, she was waiting on the wharf for him. They had arranged to correspond, but she told him he must write her in care of Obst since she did not care to give her real name and address. He thought this odd, but she promised affectionately that she would send him money, so he decided not to bother her with harassing questions.

The trial of Bailie-Stewart growing out of his trip to Germany and his subsequent visits to Holland was a sensation in Great Britain, for rarely have either officers or men in the British Army been suspected, much less convicted, of espionage in favour of a foreign country.

A great mystery was made of Shining new British tanks rumbled across famed Aldershot... and the scribbled notes of a young British officer told tales about them. He was the same young officer who had dined and wined with Fraulein "Marie Louise" and her mysterious friend in a Berlin cafe.

the case all through. The young officer was held in the Tower of London and it was rumoured that he was watched night and day and allowed to communicate with no one, not even a lawyer. The Government squelched this report by a formal denial, but already the House of Commons had talked menacingly of an investigation.

TRIAL HELD SECRETLY.

He was tried upon ten charges. It was alleged that in Berlin during August, 1932, he had, in association with Otto Waldemar Obst, made notes of organization of tanks, armoured cars, their equipment, armament and structure as well as the patterns of automatic rifles and the organization of tank brigades; also that he had obtained material at the Aldershot military depot which might be useful to the enemy. The other charges made the same allegations under different dates.

Bailie-Stewart pleaded not guilty. Since important military documents were involved and since some of the witnesses for the state were from the War Department and the Directorate of Military Operations and Intelligence while others were foreigners whose lives might be jeopardized if their names were known, reporters and the public were barred much of the time from the trial. This gave rise to a new crop of mysterious rumours and England boiled with excitement.

The prosecution brought out that certain acts of Bailie-Stewart had caused a watch to be kept upon his correspondence with the result that important letters had been intercepted. One of these, it was alleged, had been sent by the lieutenant to Obst to thank him for settling promptly "a small debt." The interesting thing about this letter was that it was signed "Alphonse Polret."

Two letters, said to have been sent to Bailie-Stewart by Marie Louise, were also introduced. One, received on November 14, 1932, enclosed ten five-pound Bank of England notes, and referred to money loaned to her by Bailie-Stewart which she said she could not pay back all at once. Another received December 7, enclosed forty pounds and said that she was "paying the balance of the loan."

Investigation of Bailie-Stewart's bank account revealed that he never had so much as fifty pounds at any time that he could have lent anybody. He said, however, when questioned at the time, that a wrong construction had been put on the letters. He was unable to explain then why he had called himself Alphonse Polret, but he claimed that the money had been sent to him by a woman he had met in a Berlin park and fallen in love with.

At the trial, he accounted for the Alphonse Polret signature by saying that he refused to sign his own name because Marie Louise would not sign hers. He also changed his story of the place of meeting with Marie Louise from a park to a cafe.

GIVES ALIBI.

He explained that the paper found in his possession with the address of the German Military Defence upon it was the one he had been carrying when he cherished the idea of becoming a liaison officer with the German army. His attorney insisted also, that certain books and documents he had drawn from the British military library were easily available to most people, and that the cuttings and photographs found in his possession had been published in various papers and were not secrets.

Bailie-Stewart himself explained his reference notes to tanks and rifles as bits of information he had jotted down from time to time, to use as clenchers in an argument with his brother, also an army officer.

He denied that his trips to Holland were for the purpose of meeting agents of Germany, and said, on the contrary, that the journeys were love journeys to meet Marie Louise. He admitted that he always hoped she would give him money as well as love.

The lieutenant denied vehemently that he had betrayed his country for fifty pounds or any other sum. His attorney insisted that there was no proof that either Obst or Marie Louise was a secret agent and asserted that the story his client told was true—he was merely a foolish young man who had become entangled with a young woman who gave him money.

The Judge Advocate put it bluntly.

"You know what the expression 'keeping a woman' means?" he asked. The accused answered "Yes."

"Have you heard the contrary of a woman keeping a man?" the Judge Advocate continued. Again the accused answered "Yes."

"Do you think this comes within the latter category?" the Judge Advocate inquired, and the accused answered meekly, "Yes, it does, Sir."

BUSINESS-LIKE LOVE LETTERS.

The Prosecutor showed that neither Obst nor Marie Louise was put into the witness box by the defence to substantiate its claims that all the letters which passed between Bailie-Stewart and the girl he allegedly was in love with were singularly business-like and finally that while it was difficult for private individuals to get foreign money in Germany, the notes received by Bailie-Stewart were in consecutive numbers.

After a long summing up from the Judge Advocate, the court brought in a verdict clearing the defendant upon three of the ten charges and sentencing him to five years imprisonment.

NOT A WORD ABOUT THE TWO MEN who so unobtrusively appear in the picture on the page on the left!

Perhaps it is sufficient compliment that they are in the picture at all; but it must be conceded that although the male of the human species does not adorn himself with the colours of the rainbow when formally attired, his appearance must nevertheless be correct.

The seeming simplicity of man's attire does not mean that he walks into a shop and buys a suit plus the various odds and ends to go with it.

Oh Dear No! The discriminating male is as fastidious as any woman, and when he looks at ease he feels at ease in the knowledge that he is correctly and comfortably tailored.

FLIGHT TO THE MOON "PROJECTED"

RADIUM NECESSARY

FRENCH SCIENTIST ON PROPOSAL

THE CARDINAL POINTS

Paris, May 25.

Do you want to go to the moon?

Harness radium and you can do it, according to Professor Isidore Bay, of Lyons.

Power beside which the explosion of the world's greatest arsenal would be as a mere puff of smoke, he declares, can be found only in the mysterious and precious substance known as radium.

Everything else is ready. Plans have been drawn up. Even the schedule, three hours and five minutes each way, has been set.

CARDINAL PROBLEMS.

The cardinal problems of the venture are as follows:

(1) How to leave the earth at the required speed—7½ miles per second—without killing the voyagers.

(2) How to control the direction and speed of the rocketship in its voyage of 252,715 to 221,446 miles and safeguard the lives, if not the comfort of the voyagers.

(3) How to land on the moon without damaging life and property, so as to bring the voyagers back to earth.

The cannon or catapult idea being out of the question, the rocketship—calculations are made for a vehicle weighing 100 tons—would have to start from scratch and gradually increase its speed to the required points on its own power.

M. Bay's rocket would require 24 minutes of flight over 4,000 miles to attain the requisite speed of seven and one half miles per second and at this point the power would be turned off. The rocket would continue through space on its own momentum, which would have diminished to 2,000 metres a second at the time of entering the zone of lunar attraction.

STEERING IN THE VOID.

About 180 miles from the moon, with the ship's speed naturally increasing every second, the power again would be turned on, but this time to act as a brake. The rocket would be steered about like a liner backing into its wharf and decelerate on the moon would be effected without shock. The 180 miles would be covered in 3 minutes, 46 seconds, according to M. Bay.

Thus, theoretically, the earth-moon voyage would take 48 hours and 58 minutes.

"But" noted the savant, "what would be the fate of the passengers who, having been abandoned to the void, would have the sensation of losing their weight and plunging through space?"

This sensation would be effected in three hours and five minutes and would require 131 times the power needed for the two-day trip. The force needed would be equivalent to 67,000,000 heat calories or 4,760,000 (European) horsepower.—United Press.

TRADE TALKS

BETWEEN BRITAIN AND URUGUAY

London, May 25. Informal and explanatory talks have been proceeding for some months with the Uruguayan Government, through their Legation in London, with a view to concluding a commercial agreement. At present no commercial treaty is in force between the United Kingdom and Uruguay.

Dr. Cosío, Uruguayan Finance Minister has now arrived in London to open formal negotiations, which will probably start during the next fortnight at the Board of Trade. Dr. Cosío will be assisted by, among others, Dr. Roberto MacEachen, Counselor to the Legation, and Don Dodoro, Minister Plenipotentiary.

Uruguay is chiefly interested in agricultural products, including wheat and wool, and the United Kingdom in cotton yarns and manufactures, coal, and a variety of iron and steel.—British Press.

MARCUS SHOW OF 1934

COLONY'S COMING ATTRACTION

What is claimed to be the most pretentious theatrical attraction ever to come to the Far East from abroad will now to the amusement seekers of Hongkong on Sunday, June 10, when the Marcus Show of 1934 will open a short engagement at the Queen's Theatre.

Florida accounts of magnitude and merit have been made previously for attractions that failed to fulfil the glowing encomiums of their publicity promoters. It is not remarkable that theatre-goers in this Colony should take the pronouncements of the sponsors with proverbial grain of salt. However, in the case of the Marcus Show, reports of its worth are convincingly substantiated by the combined press of Tokyo and Shanghai, the only two cities thus far visited on the round-the-world tour.

Some seventy persons are engaged. Over fifty of these are stage performers including a chorus of personable young women to the extent of a score and a half. The company carries its own orchestra which will be augmented by local melodists. A large staff of back-stage artisans, electricians, costumers and dressers are required.

Three different and distinct extravaganzas, "La Vie Parée," "Broadway Merry Go-Round" and "Okay," each running some two and three quarter hours and each produced in thirty or more diverse and colourful scenes, will be offered during the short stay in Hongkong.

Two complete performances will be given daily, matinee at 5.15 and night at 8.15. Owing to the length of the stage production no pictures will be shown.

Despite the large transportation expense entailed in bringing the large organization across the Pacific the prices to be charged at the Queen's will not exceed that in vogue for this attraction during its tour of the leading legitimate theatres in the United States.

NEW TREATMENT OF MALARIA

TOTAQUINA PROVES WORTH

Geneva, May 25.

Totaquina the new drug to combat malaria is proving its worth. Hospitals and dispensaries in Algeria, Morocco, Malaya, China, France, Italy, Roumania and Spain are using totaquina. Instead of quinine, according to the League Health Section's new survey describing ten years' warfare against malaria.

The chronic shortage of quinine, the world production of which is 572 tons less than required annually, is considered to be one of the main difficulties of eradicating malarious areas.

To find a cheap substitute for quinine, League experts experimented patiently for months until they discovered totaquina which is a total alkaloid mixture from different alkaloids of cinchona. It has been approved by the League's Malaria Commission representing all the various schools of malariology.—United Press.

BRITISH SHIPPING PLIGHT

SIR ARCHIBALD HURD'S PROPOSAL

OUT-SUBSIDIZE THE SUBSIDISED

London, May 25.

Great Britain's intense anxiety to rescue her shipping industry from its present plight is due to the fact that shipping is her greatest source of income from abroad.

Her income from shipping—£59,000,000 last year and £130,000,000 in 1929—far exceeds that from any of her visible exports, whether cotton, coal, or iron and steel. It is more than three times her income from the export of woolen and worsted.

But with, according to the Chamber of Shipping, close to £300,000,000 invested in this industry, about one-eighth of British ocean-going tonnage is completely laid up and the remaining seven-eighths is either running at a loss or barely covering its working expenses. This is attributed by the Chamber to ruinous competition from three big fleets subsidized by their respective states—the United States, France and Italy—and from Germany, which has loaned Government funds to its merchant marine, as well as from Greece with its excessively low capital and operating costs.

AMERICAN COMPETITION

The most striking example of competition from a state-subsidized fleet, it is pointed out, is the American competition for the trade between the two British Dominions of Australia and New Zealand. According to the Hon. Alexander Shaw, chairman of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the British ships which have continued in that struggle are taking "severe and continuous losses" due to the low rates now prevailing.

The British proportion of total world tonnage was 41.6 per cent before the War and has now shrunk to 27.9 per cent. Total British tonnage to-day is a little less than it was in 1914 but its effective carrying capacity, owing to increased efficiency, is slightly greater than in 1914; on the other hand, the effective capacity of shipping under the French flag has increased 51 per cent, that of Italy by 89 per cent, and that of Japan by 149 per cent, and that of the United States by 218 per cent.

£1,000,000,000 IN SUBSIDIES.

According to the Chamber of Shipping, various countries have spent since the War more than £1,000,000,000 in subsidizing their merchant marines.

Latest and most discouraging blow of this sort was when the South African Government last year granted a subsidy of £150,000 to the Italian lines which according to the Chamber, were already enjoying a subsidy of £250,000 from the Italian Government.

"Such a gratuitous blow at Imperial communications and at the prosperity of British trade," says the Chamber sadly in its annual report, "does not harmonize with the spirit of mutual help on which the Ottawa agreements were based." But the British merchant marine is losing even in the home trade. Last year the total entrances and clearances from ports in the United Kingdom showed a decline of more than 1,000,000 tons for British vessels, while those of foreign vessels rose by over 2,750,000 tons.

HURD SOLUTION.

Sir Archibald Hurd, in a paper read before the Institute of Transport, says that if all Governments agreed to abolish subsidies, the shipping industry of the world "would be immeasurably prosperous, for between 10,000,000 and 15,000,000 tons would instantly fade away, leaving planist, but symptoms of neuritis in early youth prevented this. He became an organist and before he was 18 he was presiding over the organ and choir at Wyck Rissington, Gloucestershire. There he laid the foundations of his knowledge of choral effect. In 1893, he went to the Royal College of Music and in 1895 obtained a scholarship in composition.

TRAGIC DEATH OF GUSTAV HOLST

By a lucky accident, he added the trombone to his other studies while at the college and on leaving it decided to become a trombonist. For years he played in provincial theatres, cycling with his trombone on his back from one town to another. He was then for some time a member of the Scottish Orchestra.

ORCHESTRAL GENIUS.

Holst was essentially an orchestral composer and this experience of the orchestra from the inside helped to give him the sure touch that marks all his orchestral writings. This phase lasted till 1903 when he became music teacher at the Alwyn School, Dulwich, later adding the Passmore Edwards Institute, St. Paul's Girls' School and Morley College to his list.

From 1919 to 1923 Holst, who is a born teacher, taught at Reading College and in the former year he became composition teacher at the Royal College of Music.

In spite of his busy life, he never ceased to compose, but he had to wait many years for recognition. The great "Planets," suite, the "Hymn to Jesus," the "Ode to Death," the "Hymn to the Unknown," the "Bathos Hymn," the "Ave Maria" for female chorus, the "Beni Mora" ballet suite, full of colour and Eastern melody, the "Cloud Messenger," perhaps his finest piece of choral writing, and "The Perfect Fool" were the culmination of a long series of strivings after the same ideals.

ORIENTAL THEMES.

In his earlier days, Holst devoted himself to Eastern themes, writing an Oriental and a Japanese suite, the symphonic poem "India" and "Hymns from the Rig-Veda." His opera "The Perfect Fool" is a light-hearted mixture of romance and parody, and was a decided success when originally produced in London. Another opera "Savitri" was too intimate for Covent Garden, but was a great favourite on the British Opera Co's tours.

Holst's other works include "Invocation" (cello and orchestra), "The Trojan Women" (solo chorus orchestra), the "Cotswolds" symphony, "Hymn to Dionysus," "St. Paul's" suite, a fugue overture and concerto and a choral symphony which was well received at Leeds. "At the Boar's Head" which is based on the Falstaff episodes in "Henry IV" was produced successfully in 1925. In 1926 he wrote another opera "The Golden Goose." Holst's music has been the subject of considerable controversy.—British Wireless and Special.

It is hereby notified that Mr. J. D. Lloyd resumed duty as Superintendent of Imports and Exports on 25th May.

the more efficient fleets to survive."

The Ministers in London of Holland, Sweden, Norway and Denmark have pressed the British Government to call an international conference looking to the abolition of subsidies. Germany has also, it is understood, indicated her approval of such a step. But the difficulties in the way are regarded as formidable.

British shipowners are reluctant to urge a subsidy, feeling that the example would be contagious and a bad situation made completely hopeless. But Sir Archibald Hurd contends that if overtakes to other nations fail, then the British subsidy to its premier industry "should be so large as to make all other subsidies ineffective and thus pave the way to a return to the well-tried principle of economic freedom of the seas."—United Press.

FAR EAST GAMES AFFAIR

Scathing Comment
By "Bulletin"

AN EDITORIAL

Public reaction in Manila to the action of the Philippines and Japan in breaking away from the Far Eastern Athletic Federation, is well expressed in the following letter which appeared in Manila Bulletin on May 22.

Sic Transit

And in the name of "good sportsmanship", entirely divorced from any thought of politics, we are supposed to cry, "The King is dead, long live the King" and cheer ourselves hoarse for the new "Oriental" athletic association. Frankly, we can't. Our gorge rises.

China was a moving spirit in the founding of the Far Eastern Athletic Association 22 years ago. Dr. Wu Ting-fang and Bishop Brent worked out the details and then invited Japan to join with them. Yesterday, in an atmosphere of solemn mockery and uncharged hypocrisy the Philippines took its orders from Japan and insisted in bowing China out of the picture with due attention to constitutional technicalities.

All sportsmanship and constitutional trouble, we are supposed to believe, but the public knows better. With characteristic finesse the name of Manchukuo was kept out of the discussion, but the fact remains that Japan was determined to get its puppet state into the association or wreck the association. The Chinese, naturally, could not be expected to act as hosts in the next games to a country which they believe to have been wrested by Japanese bayonets from Chinese soil.

In effect the Japanese were determined that China, of all nations, should recognize, factually, a country which no nation other than Japan has recognized diplomatically. If it was not deliberately intended as a humiliation, it certainly would have served that purpose. China is quite right, under the circumstances, to withdraw, but it will be a long time before all of us can understand why the Philippines had to be a party to such a shabby procedure.

For cool and collected insolence the Japanese position takes a lot of beating. The little touch about moving the games to Tokyo, if for any reason China's invitation could not be accepted.

Ebeling's first wicket of the Australian cricket tour was secured, when he scattered Gibbons' stumps in the manner as pictured above. This occurred during the Worcester v. Australians match.

GILLIGAN IMPRESSED WITH AUSTRALIANS

Interesting Critique Of Visiting Test Team

A. E. R. Gilligan, former England captain, has the following interesting commentary on the first day's play in the Australians v. Worcester match, in the London "News-Chronicle."

Don Bradman, Australia's super batsman, provided one of the two features of the second day's play in the Australians' opening match at Worcester with a brilliant century, which he reached just before the close of play.

He was obviously short of practice and opened in a very shaky manner. But luck favours skill, and fortune smiled almost as broadly as Bradman did on each occasion that he might have been out.

BRILLIANT DISPLAY. After ten, however, in partnership with Woodfull, we saw the real Bradman. He gave a brilliant display of forcing batmanship, with well-timed strokes—all-round the wicket. It was the cream of cricket.

He reached his first hundred of the tour with a beautiful stroke to the deep mid-wicket boundary. The other feature occurred in the pre-lunch period when Walters and Pataudi were having a great duel with Grimmett and O'Reilly. The two Worcester batsmen appeared to be in excellent form, but the bowlers were equally good and each ball that was sent down was closely watched by the largest crowd I have ever seen on this ground.

Walters played a fine innings and he is very likely to open the Test matches.

His defence was perfect and he showed enterprise in jumping to Grimmett bowled superbly and his success so early in the tour must be particularly gratifying to Woodfull in view of the doubts cast in some quarters about his bowling strength.

The Australian fielding was very good, with Bromley particularly noticeable for his quick moving in to the ball and smart return. Bradman, despite the fact that he misjudged a somewhat easy catch at long on, showed that his fielding is as brilliant as ever on the boundary and no one dared to run an extra one when the ball was in his hand.

Wall bowled extremely well and only had six runs hit off his 21 overs. He did not go all out, but kept an admirable length.

Woodfull, chiefly by leg glances, played himself in well against some good right-handed medium bowling by Jackson, but was lucky to be missed by Martin at second slip early on. Ponsford was not so fortunate and fell a victim to the vigilance of Nichol at first slip.

Walters handled his bowlers well and proved himself to be a wise captain in moving his fieldmen to block both Woodfull's and Bradman's pet strokes. He was, also very safe and alert at cover point.

Women And Five-Set Tennis Games

AN OLD IRISH CUSTOM

Have women ever been called upon to play the best of five sets in open competition, and if so where, asks Mr. H. S. Scrivener in this year's edition of Ayres' Almanack.

Under the existing rules it is definitely laid down that the maximum number of sets in a match where women take part shall be three.

This was not always the law, Mr. Scrivener reminds his readers, and the correct answer to his question is that the final of the mixed doubles championship of Ireland was the best of five sets to the end of the last century. "After that it was sometimes the best of three and sometimes the best of five for several years more. Probably the referee was empowered to use his discretion as to which it should be; but at any rate it was not till 1906 that the best of five was given up for good and all."

It is curious how many young English players are lured into an attempt to play M. Slem at his own game when they face him in a singles match. C. M. Jones, Junr., has twice endeavoured to "out-Slem" our Indian visitor recently with fatal results. Slem can still make a sequence of one hundred or more strokes in a rally if pat-ball methods are resorted to; indeed there are few players in the game to-day who could adopt the Indian's own methods with any prospects of victory against him.

As an experiment several of the chairs used by umpires at Wimbledon will be raised 18 inches higher than formerly for this year's Championship Meeting. The possibility of mistaken decisions will be considerably lessened with these higher chairs.

FOUR COUNTY CRICKET GAMES END IN DRAWN STATE

YORKSHIRE AND WARWICKSHIRE DIVIDE THE POINTS

LARWOOD BOWLS HALF SPEED AGAINST CAMBRIDGE

London, May 25.

Only three of the seven county matches which ended to-day were attended by outright results, the others being decided on first innings, or, as in the case of Yorkshire and Warwickshire, left drawn with points equally divided.

Kent, Derby and Sussex all gained handsome victories, but Lancashire, following their crushing reverse at the hands of Yorkshire, were again on the wrong side of the scoring book when they lost first innings points to Essex.

RESULTS AT A GLANCE.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

Middlesex (458-9 dec.) beat Somerset (253 and 419) on first innings.
Essex (305-8 dec.) beat Lancashire (187 and 160-3) on first innings.
Worcester (505-5 dec.) beat Glamorgan (235 and 167-1) on first innings.
Yorkshire (370) drew with Warwickshire (205-5).
Kent (333 and 211) beat Gloucester (173 and 163) by 235 runs.
Derbyshire (345) beat Northants (120 & 78) by innings and 174 runs.
Sussex (345) beat Leicester (241 and 98) by innings and 6 runs.

OTHER MATCHES.

Australians (433 and 10-1) drew with Hampshire (420 and 169-7 dec.).
Notts (223-9 dec. and 105-2) drew with Cambridge (245 and 219-7 dec.).

Dazzling batting by the Nawab of Pataudi and Gibbons put Worcester in an absolutely safe position against Glamorgan, but the pottersmen had to remain content with first innings points. Middlesex again failed to make the utmost of an early advantage.

Hampshire, as expected, easily drew with the Australians, and Cambridge held their own well against Notts, in a match where bowlers somewhat dominated.

BOWLERS IN LIMELIGHT. Although seven centuries were hit, including a 214 not out by Pataudi, bowlers came more into the limelight. Freeman was prominent with two successful spells against Gloucester, which earned for him 11 wickets for 137 runs. The other trundlers returned figures of merit.

Nevertheless scoring was well up to average. Middlesex v. Somerset and Hampshire v. Australians games produced over 1,000 runs apiece, and other encounters aggregated between 800 and 900 runs.

To Worcester fell the distinction of scoring the highest total of the programme. They reached the big score of 505 for 5 wickets declared. The Nawab of Pataudi, former Oxford University star batsman, came along with a customary double-century—his first of the current season—and remained undefeated. Gibbons offered excellent support with a well played 157. Nevertheless Glamorgan quite easily saved the game.

Rain made several stoppages in Yorkshire's match and there was insufficient time for two completed innings. Warwick were holding their own quite well. In reply to the "Tykes" 270, Wwant and his merry men replied with 205 for 6.

LARWOOD AT HALF SPEED. Larwood's appearance at Cambridge aroused keen interest, but Reuter states he did not bowl at his best at his fastest, and was content to capture three wickets for 68 runs.

However, Voce, a certain Test player, was a good form against the University, taking 6 for 51.

A. E. G. Baring, who bowled with such marked success in the early stages of the Australian innings against Hampshire, had his figures later ruined, and when the Australians' innings closed at 433, his analysis was 5 for 121.

Nevertheless Hampshire shared the honours of the match, for Arnold returned to the crease in a second knock, to take 109 runs in the visiting attack, and was left undefeated at the drawing of stumps.

Austria And Foot-Fault Rule

The Austrian Lawn Tennis Association informed the International Lawn Tennis Federation that they desire to alter the present foot-fault rule (number seven in the Rules of Lawn Tennis) and substitute for the present text the following:—

7. The server shall throughout the delivery of the service stand with one foot behind (i.e. further from the net than) the base-line.

The word "stand" means: (a) Not to change the position by walking or running.

(b) To maintain contact with the ground. When the meeting of Davis Cup nations is held on July 31, the Austrian L.T.A. are to propose that the Qualifying Competition for the European group of the Davis Cup be abolished and that the draw be conducted in the former way when every nation was at liberty to challenge in the European group.

L.T.A. HANDBOOK 25th Anniversary Issue

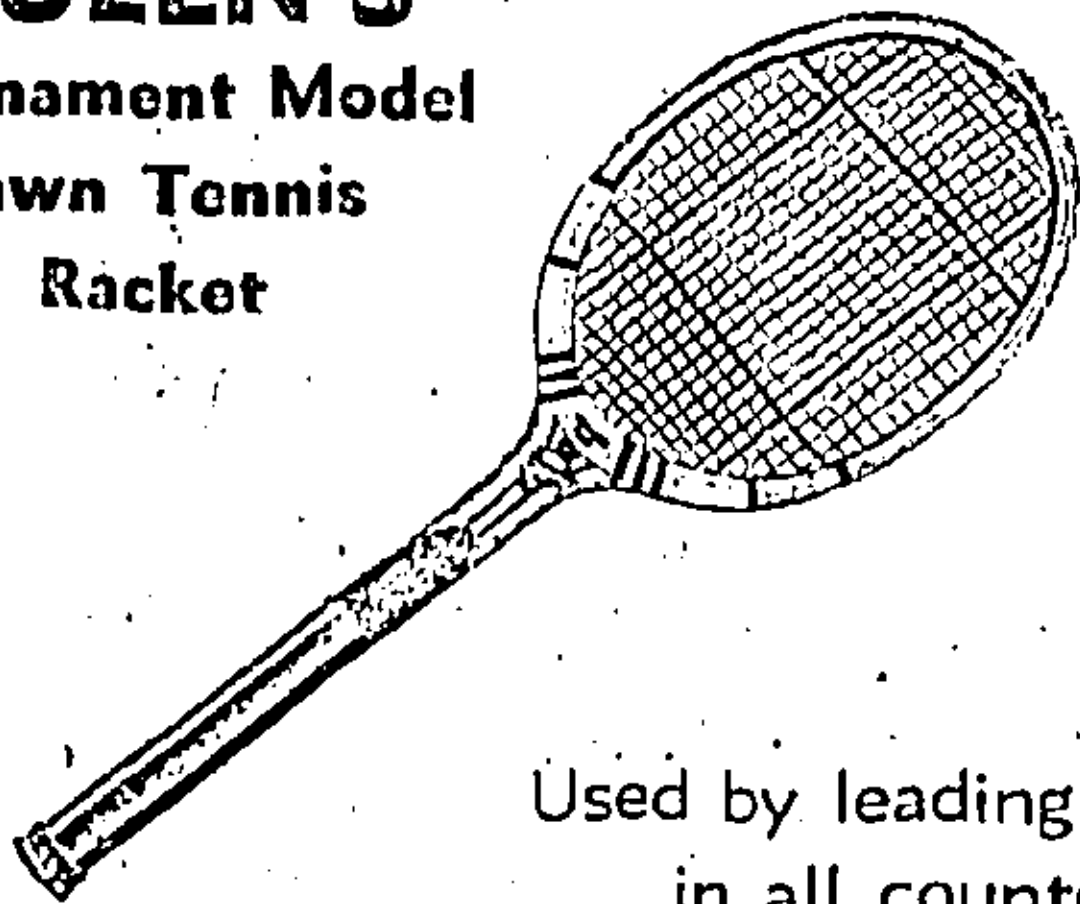

A special anniversary number, commemorating the 25th year of the Hongkong lawn tennis league, has now been issued by the Lawn Tennis Association.

It is an attractive volume, containing a mine of interesting and useful information, together with suitable illustrations. It includes the season's fixtures and an inset setting out last year's results in detail.

The book is now obtainable from Mr. D. S. Green, Dunlop Rubber Co., S.C.M. Post Building, and club secretaries should send round for copies from him. Supplies of score pads and result sheets can also be obtained from Mr. Green.

drive Grimmett, when the bowler overpitched, which only occurred very rarely. Pataudi was seeing the ball well and looked set for a big score when an unfortunate misunderstanding found Walters and him at the same end.

Oldfield, who kept wicket beautifully, quietly removed the balls. From this disaster Worcester never recovered.

I was very much impressed with O'Reilly. On a wicket which was a little too slow for him his command of length, his deceptive and varied flight and occasional fast ball caused much discomfort to the batsmen.

FAR EAST GAMES AFFAIR

ed was a nice contribution from the Philippines. Indeed, Japan's calm and deliberate annexation of the Far Eastern Athletic Association is a striking parallel, in miniature, to the annexation of Manchukuo itself. It is at least a good thing that the Philippines got its bid on record for the 1942 games to be held in Manila. Otherwise, it seems apparent that they could have been held at Changchun.

But then perhaps by 1942, the Japanese expect to have a corps of "technical advisers" on duty in the Philippines, also, so it may come to the same thing.

After all, the Japanese are hardly to be blamed for entertaining such hopes since the Philippines has indicated clearly that placing Japan in the summer honours and that no consideration of mere trifles like fair play, tradition, honour and real, not ceremonial sportsmanship can be so important as that major objective.

However, the Chinese are not to be censured if they refuse to take much stock in the merely-mouthing talk about "sportsmanship" and "constitutional procedure." It will require quite a bit more than oratory to persuade them, or anyone else that there is anything particularly "constitutional" in the simple fact that Japan bluffed the Philippines into acquiescence and that China took the Philippines has a perfect right to make its friends where it thinks best. But if Tokyo is so much more important the Philippines might at least admit it and tender a profound apology to China, rather than add the insult of inactivity to the injury of cowardly betrayal.

FIRST GAMES ARRANGED FOR JUNE 5

COMPLETE PROGRAMMES FOR FIRST WEEK

Dates and greens for the open singles lawn bowls championship have been fixed and according to schedule the first matches will be played off on Tuesday, June 5 next. If there is no interruption and no postponement the first round games will be concluded by Tuesday June 12 and the draw for the second round will be made immediately.

Howard on the Civil Service green and A. O. Brown and B. E. Maughan play P. A. Yvanovich and H. A. S. Alves on the Hongkong Football Club green.

Two rink matches have been fixed by the players for next week. It is particularly requested that skips notify the Hon. Secretary of the Hongkong Lawn Bowls Association of any rink games which might be arranged so that when the matches in the pairs and singles championships are fixed they will not clash with the rink matches.

In connexion with the pairs championship Jas. Watson of the Taikee R.C. has had to withdraw on account of illness and his place is being taken by W. Weir, who will now partner T. F. Stainton.

FIREMAN GAOLED

AFTERMATH OF GASOMETER FIRE DISASTER

Three months' hard labour was the sentence imposed by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, on Cheung Kit, a fireman attached to the Central Fire Station, charged with larceny of a quantity of jewellery from No. 8 Clarence Terrace on May 15, after the gasometer fire.

Mr. Hamilton, in convicting defendant, remarked that it was only a question of guilty intent, and if defendant had been working at Clarence Terrace all the while instead of going to Chung Shing Street, where he was ordered by Mr. Brooks, he might have believed his story, but he could not believe that a man with jewellery valued at over $500 could place it in his pocket and forget about it when he was moved and passed Mr. Brooks. If he had worked continuously at Clarence Terrace no conviction would have been registered.

Addressing Mr. Brooks, Mr. Hamilton said he thought there should be a definite standing order, giving precise instructions for the conduct of firemen in such cases. Firemen should immediately cease work and hand over valuables recovered. They should not be allowed to touch valuables, and once they touched valuables they should at once report.

Present in Court was Mr. Grant, A. S. P., Inspector Hourihan, in charge of the case, and Mr. H. T. Brooks, Superintendent of the Central Fire Station.

The Evidence.

Sergeant Wagland said that at 7 a.m. on May 15 he saw a party of firemen begin work on clearing the debris from No. 8 Clarence Terrace. As they were working, several articles were picked up and passed on to the Police. About 7.40 a.m., he saw three firemen ordered by Mr. Brooks to Chung Shing Street. They passed Mr. Brooks, himself, two Russian constables in uniform and two Chinese constables in uniform, on their way to Chung Shing Street. He did not hear or see any of them make a report of jewellery being picked up. About 7.55 a.m. he had reason to believe that jewellery had been picked up by fireman No. 89 (defendant), and, with Mr. Brooks, he went to Chung Shing Street in search of the three firemen. The three firemen were searched. Sergeant Fitches came on the scene in the meantime and witness found in defendant's right hand trouser pocket a quantity of jewellery, which he handed over to Sergeant Fitches. While he was searching the other two firemen, defendant made no attempt to hand over the jewellery.

Defendant, in a statement, said that he found the articles of jewellery and put them into his pocket. He meant to return them to the Superintendent after he had finished his work. The Superintendent sent him on another job in Chung Shing Street, and he was searched when going to get some hose. It was true the articles were found on him, but he had no intention of keeping them, although he had every chance of putting them away. It was just an oversight on his part, and he did not anticipate being searched. When the other two men were being searched, he was not aware he had the things on him.

Mr. Brooks added that defendant had been in the Force since August last, was a good worker and had a clear record.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

The story of "Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing," a First National picture which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre was hailed by many critics as a sensational human document when it appeared in book form. It is said to have gained in sheer thrilling intensity, in its dramatization for the screen, as it presents the amazing story of a 1,000 men without women and 1,000 women without men. The original story is by the only man with a wide enough knowledge of criminal character and sympathetic understanding to have conceived and written it, Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing, the man who has been sitting on the lid of a human volcano for many years past at the famous New York state prison. Paradoxical as it may seem there are touches of humour, glowing romance and undying love in this story which deals with the pathos and the grim tragedy of life. There are sorrows that bring tears to the eyes, and touches of loyalty that renew the faith in human nature, even when Frank Buck has been in the prison, who has portrayed the grimness of prison tragedy in "The Last Mile" and its touches of comedy in "Up the River," portrays the leading role of a convict who goes to the chair to save his sweetheart and to protect the warden who had been kind to him, in what is claimed to be the greatest picture of prison life ever filmed. There is a strong supporting cast which includes Bette Davis, Arthur Byron, Lyle Talbot, Grant Mitchell, Warren Hymer, Louis Calhern and Sheila Torrence. The screen play was dramatized from Warden Lawes' book by Wilson Mizner and Brown Holmes and adapted by Courtenay Terrell and Robert Lord. It was directed by Michael Curtiz.

"Wild Cargo"

Quiet must reign along the Asiatic jungle front since Frank Buck has come away with some of its rarest wild denizens and thousands of feet of exposed negative which has been holed down to feature footage as presented in his new animal adventure, "Wild Cargo," the EKO-Radio Picture which shows at the Central Theatre on Sunday. Movie fans are the gamblers at the extent of what is said to be a highly exciting production, wherein Frank Buck does not "pass the buck" to nature for his thrills, but goes into pit and trap and tree for the animals himself. He uses a gun to kill in only one instance, that in which a murderous python gets a flying start on him for a deadly constricting process. One of the highlights of this thrill-shot motion picture is the capture alive of a man-eating tiger. It seems that the Sultan of Johore, long a friend of Mr. Buck, reported a "striped terror" that had been making raids on native rubber workers. Buck surprised the Sultan by volunteering his services—not to kill the jungle demon, but to bring him back alive. This Buck does, but not until he has put his jungle craft to good use and has brought the lairist he learned to loss in Texas into play.

"Wharf Angel"

It's been a long time since Hollywood has given any of its pictures a background of the rip-roaring Barbary Coast of San Francisco in its hey-day. And it remained for Paramount to bring such a story to the screen, "Wharf Angel," featuring Victor McLaglen, Dorothy Dell, Preston Foster and Allison Skipworth, and now showing at the Alhambra Theatre is laid in the brawling, broiling atmosphere that made the Barbary Coast world famous. "Wharf Angel" tells the story of a tender romance between an unhappy girl and a hunted man, whose love saves them from the perils of the notorious San Francisco underworld. Foster, lithe, husky and fearless, while fleeing the police ducks into the lawless no-man's-land of Allison Skipworth's vile saloon. He immediately strikes up a friendship with McLaglen, brute of a sailor, who hides him when the police come. He stumbles into the room of Toy, one of the enigmata, played by Dorothy Dell. Here, this man with a price on his head and the girl with a price on her heart are drawn together. But unknown to Foster, who is desired by McLaglen, who thinks she loves him. And on the sea, these two derelicts confess their love, not knowing that they are both in love with the same girl. With such a situation, the picture gathers momentum, swinging steadily to the inevitable show-down, which is highlighted by the strange turn of events when the two men face one another in an argument over the girl. William Cameron Menzies and George Somner directed "Wharf Angel," from a play originally written by Frederick Schick.

"Only Yesterday"

John M. Stahl made John Boles what he is to-day as a dramatic actor.

John M. Stahl has made another star. This other star is the girl he chose to play the part of Mary Lane in "Only Yesterday," coming on Sunday for simultaneous showings at the Queen's and Alhambra Theatres. Her name is Margaret Sullivan and he saw her playing in New York in "Dinner at Eight." Several tests were made and they pleased Stahl so much that he even declared he would not make the picture unless he could have Margaret Sullivan. Why Margaret Sullivan accepted the part is harder to explain. She had already turned down three moving picture offers for more money than Universal offered her. Instead of taking one $1,500 a week offer, she went into stock at $50 a week. But something impelled her to take the role of Mary Lane in "Only Yesterday" on the promise that if she liked the movie, she would stay in them, and if she didn't, Universal would give her the privilege of going back on the stage. After Carl Laemmle, Jr. and the officials at Universal City saw the first cutting of "Only Yesterday," there was no doubt in their minds that she would stay on the screen. There was no doubt in their minds that she would be a big star. When you see her in "Only Yesterday," that will be your verdict, too.

"George White's Scandals"

Hollywood has its "yes men," but George White has his "no girls." Lola Eckhart, Eunice Coleman, Peggy Mosely and Eileen Knight are the girls. They appeared first in the stage "Scandals" in New York, went on the road with the same company and, returning to New York from the tour, were called immediately to Hollywood to join the cast of the first motion picture edition of the famous musical show. It was not until they were in the film colony for some time that White revealed he had brought them to Movietone City for a reason other than their ability to sing, dance and please the masculine eye. But at that he didn't make the revelation intentional. At the projection room White "unwound," he explained. Eventually the four girls appeared, but not until a delay waiting for them had necessitated the explanation that he had four girls on the pay-roll who are not afraid of showing disapproval as quickly as an approving "Yes" girls. "Scandals" comes to the King's Theatre on to-day.

"Ever Since Eve"

Mary Brian and George O'Brien were discussing film stunts, a business in which O'Brien has specialized for some years. "The only times I was ever hurt seriously," O'Brien said in reply to a suggestion that he takes too many chances before the camera, "was when other people forget their cues and failed to pull a rope at the right time or dubbed some assignment in connection with the stunt." "The only time I ever was really frightened in a screen stunt," contributed Mary, "was when I had to do a scene riding in the door of a motorcar. An extra volunteered for the part of driver, which carried an extra check of $10. The motorcar already was running, was got in and away we went. That boy didn't miss a bump and he went faster and faster until I was sure we both were going to get killed. The director finally shouted, 'Cut!' but he kept going. Then he confessed he had never been on a motorcar before and couldn't stop it. Finally he headed it up a steep hill and when the engine eventually stalled I jumped out and so did he." Mary and George are together for the first time in their careers in the Fox Film, "Ever Since Eve," coming on Wednesday at the King's Theatre.

"Kongo" at the Oriental

"Kongo," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of mystery and thrills in the African jungle showing at the Oriental Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. As "Deadlegs" Flint, Walter Huston, in the featured role. As "Deadlegs," Walter Huston enacts his powerful role from a wheelchair, bull-whip in hand, driving whites and blacks before the crack of his lash. He wields the tricks of magic which keep the superstitious blacks under his spell and concocts the scheme which is to trap his rival and send a white girl out to be hurled into the swamps by the natives—a diabolical scheme of vengeance. Virginia Bruce is the white girl to be sacrificed. Conrad Nagel is the derelict doctor, who seeks to save her. All the action of "Kongo" takes place in the swamp and fever-infested jungles of interior Africa. Hundreds of blacks in the grotesque paint and traditional adornments of the superstitious African natives, in the cunning of the cunning, the whites in holding them in subjection through their fear of "Juju" or voodoo magic, is vividly shown.

"Equal to a fine liqueur"

"There's no doubt in my mind. This one's equal to a fine liqueur... the bouquet is unmistakable and the flavour is the very essence of Real Old Scotch. I'll back my judgment that this one's 'White Horse.' May I have a look now?"
